Public Grain Storage Capacity Continues to Rise in North Dakota

BISMARCK, ND – The North Dakota Public Service Commission (PSC) reported today that licensed grain storage in North Dakota increased more than 5 percent in 2015, growing from approximately 427 million bushels of licensed storage capacity in 2014 to 451 million bushels currently. This figure doesn’t include private, on-farm grain storage, which is not licensed and therefore not tracked by the PSC.

“These statistics show both a remarkable capital investment by the grain industry and an amazing increase in the productivity of our farmers,” said Commissioner Randy Christmann. “These people are doing an incredible job of bringing food, fuel, and fiber to people all over the world.”

Currently the PSC licenses 381 grain warehouses and 76 roving grain buyers. Although the number of licensed public grain warehouses has decreased slightly in the last year, the capacity continues to increase. The average storage capacity of licensed public grain warehouses in North Dakota is currently 1,182,900 bushels, which has more than doubled in size since 2000. In contrast, records kept a century ago (1915) indicate there were more than 2,000 licensed elevators, but a much smaller average capacity of 30,000 bushels (total licensed capacity of approximately 60 million bushels).

Grain warehouses and grain buyers are required to be licensed and bonded and bond coverage does not exist if a buyer is not licensed. The Commission encourages farmers to sell grain only to grain warehouses and grain buyers that are licensed and bonded by the North Dakota PSC.

If a farmer sells grain to an unlicensed buyer and is not paid, the only recourse available may be action in civil court.

The PSC encourages farmers to know their rights and responsibilities, keep accurate records, and know who they are doing business with. A license can be verified via the PSC's website at www.psc.nd.gov (Click on "grain" on the left side of the screen) or by calling 701-328-2400. Farmers are also reminded to make sure they are paid for their grain in a timely manner or have signed a valid credit-sale contract. If a farmer has a question about a credit-sale contract, or if the licensee is slow in paying for grain delivered, farmers should contact the PSC's Licensing Division.

The North Dakota Public Service Commission is a constitutionally created state agency with authority to permit, site and regulate business activities in the state including electric and gas utilities, telecommunications companies, power plants, electric transmission lines, pipelines, railroads, grain elevators, auctioneers, commercial weighing devices, pipeline safety and coal mine reclamation.
